Initial document and information resources of the science of archeology in Azerbaijan and their specific characteristics

The initial document of archeology was analyzed in the submitted theses. This research covers the period from the second half of the XIX century - since the start of the first archaeological excavations, until the contemporary day. Initial document of the mass of archeological literature had been researching the history of the development of archeology science.

The first archaeological excavation has begun in the middle of the XIX century in Azerbaijan. This first excavations conducted by non-archaeologists were established materials the late Bronze Age and early Iron Age in the history of Azerbaijan. During this period, the archaeological investigations carried out in the manner, found in the samples sent to European museums with no scientific results have been achieved. Information about the progress of the investigations and their results were reflected on lists, field diaries, stock materials, archival documents, scientific reports, and scientific articles and on the bibliographies.

The documents which listed the names are the initial information sources of Azerbaijan archeology science. These document types hold a special place in the formation of the mass of documents of archeology science. The works of other nations researchers and travelers play an important role in the process.

The excavations carried out in separate areas by different professions who have come to work to Azerbaijan from European countries and Russia. They presented reports about work results in their own languages Archaeologists and ethnographers

After 20 years of the XX century, as well as in other fields of science, the science of archeology was revived. The creation of new local qualified personnel and research created the conditions for carrying out systematic archaeological research on a scientific basis. During this period, scientists was invited Russian were working in our country. One of them is I.I.Meshchaninov which played an important role in the development of archeology Azerbaijan. His plays take a special role in the formation of the mass of literary and archaeological artifacts.

Multilayered archaeological excavations were done in 70-80 years. A number of publications have already been created in the field of archeology and ethnography. And significant increase in the supply of new monographs. At that time archeology publications grouped under a separate section in current bibliographic indicators, which constituent by the Book Chamber of higher doctorate Azerbaijan.

After the our country gained independence Institute Archeology and Ethnography was establishment on the basis of Archaeology and Ethnography Sector by the decision, of the Cabinet of Ministers Azerbaijan Republic. (July 8, 1993) Its paved the way for the wider development of the science of archeology and ethnography.
